D. A. R. ELECTION BATTLE OF WITS

Candidates, Secretly Admitting Ignorance of Outcome, Try to Appear Confident.

to critics of the administration by Mrs William D. Hover, also of the District, when she made a supplementary report s treasurer general Aside from the election the feature of the session today was the presentation to the D. A. R. of a bronze tablet in memorial of the first president general. Mrs. Caroline Scott Harrison, wife of President Benjamin Harrison.

At a session this afternoon, besides voting, delegates are hearing a report by Mrs. William Libbey, of New Jer-sey, on revolutionary relics. This even-sey, on revolutionary relics. This evening the committee to prevent desegration of the flag will report.

It may be midnight or even later before the voting machines are opened and the result of the election made known. To add to the delay there is a matter of registering late delegates and the last action of the congress with respect to issuing credentials to these was to vote that the credentials committee must suspend operations while registered delegates are voting, and not resume issuance of credentials until all the 1.125 on the present list have voted. Delay of from one to two hours more seems certain if this plan is followed.

The first ballots cast today were by the national officers, and to a woman they are known to have pulled the lever for Mrs. John Miller Horton, the administration candidate. Then came voting by States, Alabama, Louisiana and New York delegations went first to the poll rooms. The States are divided into three sections, one section to each machine. The first section, headed by Alabama, finished quickly because of the relative smallness of its number. Arizona and Arkansas had voted in this section before Maine followed New York long after the A States had finished. Illinois, in the first section, took a long time, and Pennsylvania will delay progress in the third section also. These large States have many more votes than the third section also. These large States have many more votes than the third section also. These large States have many more votes than the thirly populated ones.

Mrs. Story, of course, rolled up many votes when New York voted, for despite conflicting assertions a majority of the Empire State women are known to have voted for the Manhattanite as against the Buffalo candidate. If Mrs. Story has cut into Mrs. Horton in Illinois and Pennsylvania, as her side asserts, she certainly stands some dministration candidate. Then came asserts, she certainly stands some show of being elected. But the Hor-ton assertions with respect to the votes of Pennsylvania and Illinois flatly contradict the Story declaration Strength Is Puzzle. Mrs. Bryan's strength is an enigma among the Daughters say the Southern women have voted for her in numbers. Other prominent Daughters say that Mrs. Bryan has not rolled up forty

Mrs. Bryan has not rolled up forty votes today.

The election rules are being rigorously executed by the judges and tellers, headed by a resolute chairman, Mrs. George T. Guernsey. After the convention had voted to permit registration of late arrivals during the voting today. Mrs. Guensey sent down word that it must be stopped, as it was confusing the tellers. The convention promptly agreed to stop it while the vote goes on.

Mrs. James A. Fowler, vice president general for Indiana, presented the Harrison memorial tablet. Mrs. Scott accepted in behalf of the national society. Mrs. William A. Mrs. Hoover made a statement today that the only reason the synopsis of her report yesterday was withheld from circulation until she read her report was not from fear that the administration's opponents would get time to pre-pare an attack, but that a subordinate misunderstood directions.

No Dark Horses. When the test came at the D. A. R.

Hall last evening there were no dark horses in the race. In the afternoon Mrs. William Libbery, of Prince;co, N. J., made a statement that she had been approached with reference to running, but would not, in any circum-stances. Mrs. Fowler, of Indiana, salo she would not be a candidate at this time.

It was intimuted that if a deadlock ensue, these twe women, or terhaps others, would be found in a more receptive mood. Mrs. Horton declared that talk of dark horses was an invention of the enemy. That was plainly Mrs. Horton's firm conviction, but it is known that the first work of dark horses did not come from the Story party, but from administration leaders.

The nominating session of the evening showed transactions at this son, wife of the Postmaster General, save a general reception. This concluded at 6 o'clock. At the New Williard. Manhattan Chapter of the D. A. R. Story.

Mrs. Hoover told of gifts toward this of $9,500. The rest of the $25,000 comes in savings of the administration, she said.

Mrs. Hoover was plainly angry because of the allegations circulated that the conduct of the finances of the Daughters the last two years would be attacked during this congress.

"Does this show any dishonesty? Does it show any inefficiency?" she demanded.

Unless a deadlock ensues the daugnters will have cleared the way by tonight for new business and important questions will ensue. Over one constitutional question present party lines will disappear. It is a question of "State rights" versus "Federalism," and the division which is promised will take place along sectional lines. True to history the Southern women are expected to support the movement to grant the State conferences more power and noney at the expense, it is asserted, of the national society.

The politics are more important to the American people than the enactment of new laws.

"It is an understanding of the unrest and needs of a people to which the man intrenched in office is often so blind. A defective or an inadequate law in the liands of an honest, efficient, courage-ous independent admisintrator is worth more to the cause of justice than a perfect law ir the hands of a boss-ruled administrator," the report declares.
